What is Perseverance?

Starting can be hard, but it probably won't be the only hard part. Once we start something, we need to persevere and finish the task.

Perseverance means to continue doing something, even when it becomes difficult or takes longer than we expected. To persevere means to not give up and keep going on a task, no matter what. Often when we start a big task, we will come across difficulties before the task is finished. But we cannot give up just because a task becomes hard! We must keep going and persevere to become our best selves.

Think: Have you ever quit something you started before you finished? What happened?

How can we persevere when times get tough?

1. Take a break: Sometimes the best thing for a tired mind is a break. A break could be taking a walk outside, petting your cat, or having a snack. If you think you might have a hard time getting back into your work after your break, set a timer. But a break for 15 minutes or even a few days (depending on the size of the task) can make you feel refreshed, and you may come back to the task with new motivation and ideas.

2. Remember your motivation: Sometimes when we have been working on a hard task for a while, we get so caught up in the hard parts and our negative feelings that we forget our original motivation and why we started in the first place.

3. Try changing things up: Put some music on that you enjoy, find a new place to work, or organize your workspace. These little changes can refresh our minds.

4. Think about how far you've come: If you are about to give up, think about how far you have come and what you have already done. You've already completed hard things, and you can do harder ones.

Brainstorm: Can you think of another strategy to persevere?

©ASpaceToSpeak 2020

WE CAN PERSERVERE

Directions: Fill in each strategy with your own definition of how it can be used. Try to include examples that you think would work for you! Then use the back of this worksheet (or blank paper) to create a poster encouraging someone to persevere when things get tough. Fill-in your own strategy for number 5.

1. Take A Break

2. Remember Your Motivation

3. Try Changing Things Up

4. Think About How Far You've Come

5.